

Drosera rotundifolia* L.

Round-leaved Sundew

Native

GB: Least Concern

England: Near Threatened

VC5 Not Scarce; VC6 Scarce

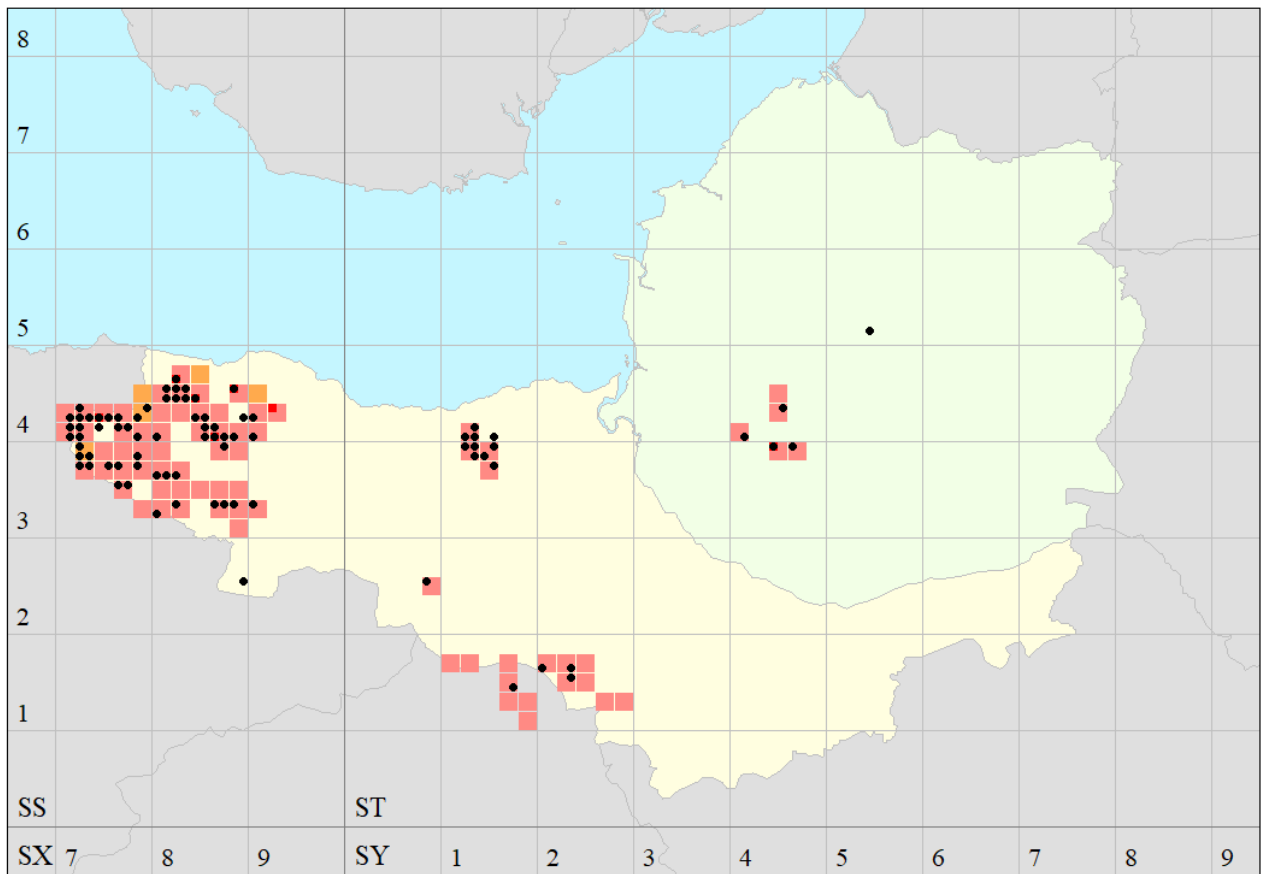

An insectivorous herbaceous perennial forming rosettes on bare peat in open bogs, flushes and wet heathland. In VC5 this species is mainly restricted to sites on Exmoor, the Quantocks and the Blackdowns and has declined in all of these areas. Away from these hills it is only known from Clean Moor SSSI (ST0825) and Briggins Moor SSSI (SS8925), where it was discovered in 2014 by Stephen Parker and members of the BSBI. In VC6 Drosera rotundifolia is Scarce and has declined markedly. Murray (1896) described it as “Plentiful on the peat moor”; it is now almost restricted to the peat moors, but is not plentiful and is only known from Ashcott Plot, Street Heath, Shapwick Heath and Westhay Moor. There are no recent records for ST44M, where it was last seen in 1992. Away from the peat moors, this species was recorded in the far southeast of VC6 by Murray (1896) on Gasper Common, now in Wiltshire. It was also recorded by H.F. Parsons on Downhead Common (Murray, 1896), but there have been no subsequent records for those areas. On the Mendips it was recorded on Blackdown [Black Down] by D. Fry and at Priddy by H.F. Parsons (Murray, 1896). White (1912) wrote that it grew “In boggy spring-heads and like spots on the Mendip moorland” but gave no records. It was not seen again on the Mendips until found by Helena Crouch and Fred Rumsey in 2011, in a boggy springhead on North Hill, Priddy (outside an SSSI). This species has declined in much of England due to loss of habitat, as a result of afforestation, encroachment by scrub, peat digging and development.
