

Galium parisiense* L.

Wall Bedstraw

Native

GB & England: Vulnerable

VC5 Rare; VC6 Rare

A small annual of walls and bare ground, where it is intolerant of competition or nutrient enrichment. Discovered new to VC5 in 2012, when Simon Leach found thousands of plants on verges and bare ground near Taunton railway station. In 2015 he found it at a second site in Taunton, at the Silk Mills Park & Ride car park, then in 2017 on an industrial estate in Taunton and in 2022 at the Taunton Gateway Park & Ride car park. In VC6 this species was recorded twice in the nineteenth century, but both records were considered dubious. Babington (1834) listed a record for Charlcombe [north of Bath: ST76N] which Murray (1896) declared to be “No doubt a misnomer”. White (1912) concurred with this view, yet wrote that “the late Mr T.B. Flower, writing to me in June, 1883, mentioned having found the plant “a few days since on old walls near Bath”.” White doubted this record too, having seen no specimen. The first confirmed record for VC6 was made in 1999, when B.G. Wanford found this species on a gravel path in a garden in Wells. In 2013, it turned up again in Wells, two small plants being found by Fred Rumsey and Helena Crouch at the edge of paving, beside a newly constructed supermarket. In 2019 this species was discovered on spoil in a quarry near Nunney. This largely Mediterranean species was formerly restricted to the south of England and East Anglia and has been lost from many early sites on walls and bare soil, but in recent years has been discovered at many new locations, often in ruderal habitats. Sites in Somerset are within the modern range of this species.
